- A major new theory from world-leading scholars
- Develops an elegant theory for explaining the design of international organizations
- Boldly cross-disciplinary: bringing insights from comparative politics to bear on a key puzzle in international relations
- Combining quantitative and qualitative methodology
- Presents ground-breaking annual data on 76 international organizations from across a 60 year span

'Deep thinking and theorizing as well as profound methodologically advanced empirical analysis—if you ask for the impossible and want to have both in one book, this one has it. It is a must-read for all serious students of International Relations.'

-- MICHAEL ZÜRN, DIRECTOR AT THE WZB BERLIN
SOCIAL SCIENCE CENTER, PROFESSOR FU BERLIN

'This sophisticated volume puts the social back into the international social contract among states. There is not an account of international organizations available today that more skillfully and persuasively combines the best of liberal and constructivist theory. Read it, and you will gain new insights into the stresses and strengths of the liberal international order.'

-- BETH SIMMONS, ANDREA MITCHELL
UNIVERSITY PROFESSOR IN LAW, POLITICAL SCIENCE
AND BUSINESS ETHICS, PENN LAW

'This impressive fourth volume in the series on postfunctionalist governance advances a theory of community and norms as the basis for global governance to explain the variation in when and how states cooperate. To test their theory the authors analyze design features across a broad range of important international institutions. As a general theory and building block dataset, the book provides a foundation for the next generation of research on international cooperation.'

-- CHRISTINA L. DAVIS, PROFESSOR, DEPARTMENT OF GOVERNMENT, HARVARD UNIVERSITY
